

Everywhere You Go

Everywhere you go, there will be people in hunger or in pain, filled with sorrow and emptiness and eyes that tears stain.
Everywhere you go, there will be people who are isolated,
waiting, and frustrated.
Waiting, waiting, waiting.
To be out of quarantine and the rooms that are suffocating.
More and more everyday
It seems like the overwhelming sadness is here to stay.
Everywhere you go, be a glimmer of hope,
Bring resilience when people are at the end of their rope.
Everywhere you go, be kind to those around you,
And others will be too.
Everywhere you go take care of others and put yourself in their shoes,
Knowing that everyone has different points of views.
Everywhere you go spread equality,
And together we will be
A world that makes other people have a feeling of belonging
In a new age that is dawning, and waking up to see
That there is a person they are meant to be.
Everywhere you go know that you're not alone
And from problems like yours other people have grown.
Everywhere you go, be a leader and make the world a better place
And follow the dreams you dared to chase.
You don't need to have a cape or superpowers, it's just the little things
That brings
Joy and hope to people around you
That will make their skies of grey turn to blue.
A smile, a compliment, or time to say hello
Could possibly make someone's heart go aglow.
The world isn't going to change if you do nothing,
But if you strive for becoming
Someone who wants to change the world,
Then do small things with love starting with the people around you.
